FUND STAGE: SCALE

Bible Translation

Of the 7,000+ languages spoken around the world, over 3,000 have little to no Scripture. What can be done?

The Upstream Problem

Nearly one billion people are trapped in the darkness of Bible poverty.* Out of more than 7,000 languages worldwide, over 3,000 have little or no Scripture—and around 500 people groups don't have a single verse in a language they best understand.*

This is more than a translation gap—it's spiritual isolation on a massive scale. Without Scripture in the language of their hearts, people are cut off from the foundation of Faith itself.

Every day, translators are faithfully moving Scripture from its original languages into new ones so that people everywhere can clearly understand God's Word. These efforts require training, technology, consulting, and community review to ensure accuracy and clarity. Along the way, they face barriers:

Language & Complexity – Grammar, cultural nuance, and theological depth require expertise and careful review.

Time & Resources – Translation takes years of steady work, significant funding, and local commitment.

External Pressures – Political, social, and logistical challenges can either speed up or slow down progress.

Yet through collaboration and innovation, the timeline is shrinking. A united movement of translators and partners is driving progress at unprecedented speed—and now needs global support to finish the work in our lifetime.

The Solving Bible Translation Fund supports the work of Illuminations. They are led by a steering committee of 5 Resource Partners and 11 Implementing Partners.
